

Since November 4, 2008, when Michigan voters passed The Medical Marijuana Act, we have received a few inquiries about medical marijuana use in the treatment of glaucoma. The current policy of the University of Michigan Department of Ophthalmology and Visual Sciences is explained below.

Physicians at the Kellogg Eye Center do not certify the use of medical marijuana for patients with glaucoma or any other eye-related condition.

Medical marijuana does not fill a need that is unmet by existing drugs approved by the FDA for glaucoma or any other eye condition.
